

Let's Draw Roles

The Hand serves as the illustrator in this activity. The Hand stands with their back to the Mouth and Eyes and may not talk. Taking directions from the Mouth, the Hand attempts to recreate a pre-drawn design he or she cannot see.

The Mouth serves as the talker and describes the design to the Hand, without seeing the design. The Mouth may question the Eyes and may not use hand gestures.

The Eyes can see the original design but cannot talk and must communicate nonverbally to the Mouth. Additionally, the Eyes must not draw the design in the air or actually show the design with gestures.
